

TIMAF 'Information Management Best Practices – Volume 1'

UNIQUE SPONSORING OPPORTUNITY

"It is, quite frankly, the best collection of case studies and solutions I've run across and will be an invaluable resource. The reports are solid, practical and real-world examples of how to do things right. Without question, the collection represents some of the best independent thinking in the field"
(Hugh McKellar, Editor in Chief KM World Magazine)

In May 2010, the TIMAF 'Information Management Best Practices – Volume 1' edition will be published. This new book introduces information management best practices from a wide variety of disciplines and organisations including HP, Motorola, Microsoft, Harvard University, University of Washington, Dublin Core, Essex County Council, Canadian Department of National Defense, Wipro, and many others. As an organisation that is active in the information management market, you have a unique opportunity to sponsor this initiative and get recognition from information management practitioners across the globe.

Sponsoring

The TIMAF Association and its publications are a volunteer based initiative. Your financial support is more than welcome. All sponsors receive a free copy of this edition.

About TIMAF

The field of information management is currently fractured and incoherent. Each sub discipline (enterprise content, document, asset, records, web content, data management to name just a few) has its own practitioners, applications and professional communities. We believe that behind the seeming differences between these 'managements' there is a deeper unity that will eventually define a strong clear foundation for all of them. TIMAF, the Information Management Foundation, provides this foundation.

About the 'Information Management Best Practices – Volume 1' publication

With 'Information Management - Best Practices' we provide a yearly compilation of high quality best practice guidance, written for and by experts in the information management field around the world. It will help professionals overcome their information management challenges. It brings complex models down to earth, with practical guidance on day-to-day problems and issues.

The 'Information Management Best Practices – Volume 1' edition appears in book format (about 370 pages). It consists of an introduction to information management and about 20 best practices written by experts and practitioners from various disciplines and organisations.

The 'Information Management Best Practices – Volume 1' edition has an ISBN and will be sold in book stores and at various web sites, web shops, and events. Several international communities have already shown interest in buying copies for their members.
